COVID-19, the colossal outbreak is carrying the employer-employee relationship to an uncharted territory as employees are increasingly absent from work during the pandemic. Reacquainting employees into the workplace will require the employers to juggle multiple logistical, financial and emotional concerns.

Scenario 1: Employee presumably or positively diagnosed with COVID-19.

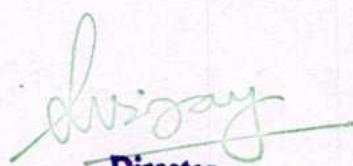

In this case the Employee shall get a paid leave of 10-14(Ten to fourteen) days from the organization from day one of his absence only in the case if he/she presents a valid Covid Positive Report for the period of his absence.

Scenario 2: Employee presumptively exposed to COVID-19 and is symptomatic.

In this case the employee shall get a paid leave of 03-04(Three to Four) days from the organization from day one of his absence to get his Covid test done and present a negative report on his joining.

Scenario 3: Employee needs to provide care for a dependent residing in the house who has been tested positive

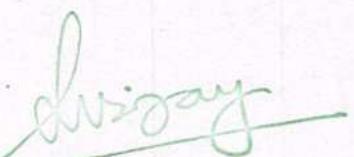

In this case the Employee has to present a valid Covid Positive Report of the dependent for the period of his/her absence and may avail a 10(Ten) day's Work from Home.
